HALLOWEEN

Early youth looks forward to three occasions in the year, when public sentiment tolerates things which would be considered intolerable at other times. These three occasions are April 1, July 4, and Halloween. April 1 is a time for many jokes that would be considered foolish at other times, July 4 is the time of unlimited noise, and Halloween is supposed to tolerate mischief. Youth becomes extremely happy on October 31, if tacitly permitted to keep doorbells ringing, tip over rubbish cans, and slam the window blinds.

The pranking youngsters find plenty of defenders, who say the kids will be young but once, and that boys must be boys. If you object to having your clothesline cut, some will say you must be getting antiquated, and your arteries are hardening.

It is also argued that such periods of license encourage many youngsters to do rowdyish and hoodlum acts, so that they get the idea that laws do not have to be obeyed. When they tip over an ash-can and leave the dirty stuff littered all over the walk or grass, it takes a busy man some time to remove the evidence of this mischief.

The two smart joker who sticks the toothpick in the electric doorbell so it rings continuously, may think he has expressed a highly original sense of humor. If he were one of a family of tired people resting after a long day's work, he would not find much humor in it.

The youthful idea of dressing up in outlandish costumes, of hollowing out pumpkins and turning them into grinning faces with candles inside, gives a chance for fun appealing to a small slaver's heart. When it comes to roughly dumping the porch chairs on the lawn and perhaps breaking one of their legs, it is about time to say "Papa spank."

The world's longest bar is to be a feature of New York's fair. The disorderly patron will, of course, be thrown out in relay.

Though it is still a small world, and growing smaller, Truth has a rather wide choice of earth to be crushed to.

Dora is doing so well with a memory course she can recall the name of the other club in a World Series.

In case of a United States of Europe, Czechoslovakia begins to shape up as Rhode Island.

If the author took ten pages to say what a modern would put in 10 words, the book is a classic.

The old idea of equality was to make things even; the new idea is to get even.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

By Courier Staff Member

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol Apr. 5, 1877. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

Sometime since it will be remembered the residence of Joshua Peirce was entered by burglars, who took among other things some silverware. The loss was supplied by the purchase of plated ware. On Saturday night last Mr. Peirce's house was again visited by burglars, and the silver which remained from the former visit was taken while the plated ware was left. The visitors also helped themselves to pies, cakes, and other edibles, and took an overcoat. The previous night the same kind of performance occurred at Edwin Wilson's on Walnut street, the thieves entered through the cellar, took some provisions and silver, and departed.

The post office will be removed to Radcliffe street, today, if nothing happens to prevent.

The directors of the water company declared a dividend of five per cent, the payment of which was begun on Monday last.

It is understood that Rev. Phillips Brooks, of Boston, will preach in St. James' Episcopal Church, on Sunday, the 22nd instant.

Eber Strimback and Valentine Ferguson are the two Bristolians who caught the first shad of the season on Tuesday night. It weighed 4½ pounds, and was sold for $1.50.

Six crews of train hands lately employed between Mantua and Jersey City, have been discharged. There are only 15 regular freight trains now running between the points referred to.

The election of vestrymen at St. James' Church on Easter Monday resulted in the selection of Messrs. David Landreth, Thomas Scott, G. M. Dorrance, Thomas Hughes, John Ward, M. D.; H. L. Gaw, R. H. Morris, Burnel Landreth, and R. C. Beatty.

The wife of Edwin Tomlinson, auctioneer at Byberry, was lighting a coal and put her head in the water, thus it exploded and set fire to her clothes and burned her very severely. There was a tub of water near by and she had presence of mind enough to run an dput her head in the water, thus keeping her face and neck from being burned. Her husband sitting in the next room heard screams and came to her rescue. In his efforts to extinguish the flames his own hands were badly burned. Mrs. Tomlinson will probably recover.

Bristol Chapter, No. 231, M. R. A. Masons, held a special election on Saturday evening to fill a vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Dr. Elias Wildman, as presiding officer. Amos B. Haddy was chosen in his stead. Benjamin Boucher was advanced to the next higher grade, and Wesley White was elected scribe.

HULMEVILLE—Thomas Eastburn, of Langhorne, has purchased of William Tilton the printing office at this place and is about removing it to Langhorne where he proposes to publish a newspaper to be called the Langhorne Beacon.

Thomas Hughes & Company, of Bristol, have rented the factory, and are busily engaged in fixing and cleaning the machinery preparatory to starting business.

NEWPORTVILLE—Mrs. Maggie Price, of Doylestown, has been appointed teacher of the primary school in place of Miss Sallie Richards who recently resigned.

Rev. Oscar R. Cook, formerly stationed at Tullytown, has been appointed to succeed Mr. Collom as pastor of the Neshaminy Methodist Church. On Saturday, Mr. Collom was here bidding adieu to his flock who were sorry to part with him as he made hosts of friends during his pastorate here and was the means of building up the church to its present flourishing condition.

A large maple sugar crop has already been secured near Johnstown.

The Bucks and Montgomery County Baptist Ministers' Conference will meet in the Bristol Baptist Church on Tuesday of next week.

LANGHORNE—The real estate of William T. Seal, at Langhorne, consisting of the Bellevue Institute property, was sold by the assignees at public sale on Thursday, the 29th ultimo. The sale was held in the large school room, and about 60 persons were present.

his friends are being hurt so much that it seemed necessary to go to extremes. Neither the conduct of Mr. Dies, the personnel of the witnesses nor the character of their testimony furnishes adequate excuse for such an amazing blast.

SUPPOSE the investigation is not conducted under court rules; suppose the chairman is not charming; suppose some of the witnesses are prejudiced—wherein do any of these things make this committee different from those which the Administration has abetted and applauded? It is true that this public plecturing of the Communist-C.I.O. link is not helping New Deal candidates, but after all it isn't the committee's fault that Mr. Roosevelt has an alliance with the C.I.O.; that the C.I.O. contributed $500,000 to his 1936 campaign; that the Communists are powerful in the C.I.O.; that Harry Bridges, C.I.O. leader and Roosevelt supporter, is an alien whom many think dangerous; that Communist leaders in every State are open supporters of New Deal candidates. It would be absurd to contend—and no one does—that Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Lewis or Miss Perkins are Communists or in sympathy with the Communist cause. Yet the Communists, as a whole, are back of Mr. Roosevelt, because they believe he unconsciously plays their game, and the C.I.O. seems to them the perfect instrument with which to work.

PUBLIC REBUFFS, curt rejection of their support, oratorical kicks in the face—none of these things divert the Communist leaders from their New Deal support, openly proclaimed by Mr. Browder in his Portland speech and regularly by

"Often a Bridesmaid"

BY HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER XVII

Summer was gone, and an early, rainy winter had set in. But Aunt Bet didn't dread the winter so much this year, because there was a new furnace. Margaret paid for it. Margaret was doing very well, surprisingly well, considering how absent-minded she was about some things.

Still, one couldn't complain, for she did a lot. It was she who hired the young Japanese girl who came every afternoon at 4 o'clock to straighten up the house and get dinner. The girl was sweet and obliging, but it was Margaret and the vacuum that really got the house clean on Sunday mornings, and it was Margaret who took charge of dinner at the eleventh hour and changed it from a haphazard meal into a close semblance to the old, unhurried dinners that had once been part of their everyday living.

Natalie was bright, and she had a good position, too, but she was temperamental and sometimes she was generous, financially and otherwise, and sometimes she wasn't. Aunt Bet didn't know just how they'd manage after Margaret was married. Alex still made a show of asking for the bills, and they all kept up the fiction that he paid them, but it was Margaret's money, of course.

Margaret was a funny girl, two highly eligible young men pursuing her, and she wasn't any nearer making up her mind than she was last summer.

Aunt Bet herself favored Joe Atwell. She'd always had a soft spot in her heart for Joe, ever since the first day that Sue brought him to the house, to a party.

Far too refined for Sue, she thought. The Deckers might have money, and they might be accepted, but Aunt Bet privately considered "him" common, and "her" pushing, and their daughter loud, and spoilt. As far as she was concerned the Raleigh-Decker match was highly suitable, and a Wickham-Atwell wedding would be equally suitable.

But what could she do about it? What could she say?

Sometimes she tried, tactfully. "Do you think you ought to disappoint Mr. Atwell so often, dear?" "Disappoint him! I'm going out with him!"

"Yes, I know, dear. But I heard . . . I just happened to overhear you tell Susan, you'd spend the evening with her, and I thought—"

"But I'm taking Joe!"

"Yes, dear. But when a young man is interested in a young girl, does he want to spend the evening with a married couple? Wouldn't it be just a little bit more flattering, if you went somewhere just with him?"

"Oh, bother! People aren't romantic that way any more! We like crowds! Kenny and Sue are well fun. There's always somebody there, and we clown around and—"

Aunt Bet, what are you up to? You used to advise numbers. Haven't you we have them in this house?"

times—"Aunt Bet stopped in confusion.

Margaret knew what she had started to say—Plenty of times with Kenny.

She said, "Plenty of times that I used to peek in a corner? That was when I was very young and foolish. I leave that to Babs and her crowd. I'm a big girl now."

Aunt Bet watched her as she laughed, and ran upstairs to dress. So pretty, so young . . . and so transparent, for all her grown-up airs. She shook her head. She thought, Someone ought to say something to her! People will notice that she's always with Kenneth, and pretty soon they'll talk!

But not even Aunt Bet knew what these visits meant to Margaret and Ken.

Now that Ken was here, Sue couldn't resist working on Joe. That he was Margaret's now, made the game more interesting. And there was no getting away from it. Sue could be interesting when she wanted to be. And demanding, too.

"Joey, you used to be the champion ice cracker! Such a way with an ice pick. Do you think you could fix some very, very nice shaved ice, so that I could mix a very, very nice drink? Oh, not you, Kenny, precious!—Kenny drinks so much better than he mixes—Come on, Joey—mama'll show you where to And the makings!"

On one pretext or another she managed to get Joe into the kitchen with her, and never, never guessed that it gave Ken the chance he wanted to talk to Margaret.

He was always trying to get her into corners. He didn't want to complain, he wanted to talk. Margie understood how he felt about everything, but were all women sort of funny about some things? Sue was a great girl, but he guessed his mother had kind of spoiled him, because she was always so even-tempered and cheery and Sue would be shouting and roaring with laughter one minute, and the next she'd be in the bedroom with the door locked, crying her eyes out, and he never knew what to expect when he got home, and whether there'd be anything to eat in the house and—

"It's you that's spoilt, you big mama's baby," Margaret said to him, and wished that Sue and Joe would come back, because Ken was more than ordinarily upset.

"Oh, it's not—it's not. And that's another thing, I'm no mama's baby and I wouldn't even want the folks around all the time. I figure this is our house—Sue's and mine, but I do think Sue ought to make Ma feel a LITTLE bit at home!"

"Sue's a wonderful hostess. Everybody says so."

"I know. But that's it. Look at Sue, out in the kitchen now with Joe. Or she'll take any of the crowd out there, or the whole bunch of us can go out and raid the Joe box. But when Ma comes she sits her down on the sofa, and brings her a cup of tea or a glass of water or something on a tray, and Ma isn't used to that, and it makes her feel bad. And when I say anything, like, 'Why don't you let Ma go out in the kitchen where she'd feel at home?' Sue'll get on her high horse and make some highfalutin remarks about not wanting to entertain in the kitchen, or something reflecting on Ma and my home, and if I say the LEAST thing about HER mother dropping in any hour of the day or night and talking your arm off, why that's different! That's altogether different!"

"Sure it's different. The bride's mother is always different. Come on—let's see what they're doing out in the kitchen."

"But Maggie, I want to ask you—"

It was pure pain for Margaret. Ken, her Ken, subject to Sue's whims. Sue taking it out on him that his mother was difficult . . . that they didn't have any money, that she had no maid . . .

Margaret was always running away from him, and then coming back, because she couldn't stay away.

Perhaps, she thought . . . Perhaps, if I married Joe, or Lane . . . And that was it. They were both so nice. And she wasn't the least bit in love with either one of them.

It was Margaret's Saturday off, and she was devoting it to a good old washing and ironing. She had half a dozen pieces of her best lingerie in the wash bowl, and was looking around for something else to add to the collection, when Sue dashed in.

Sue had a wonderful idea. A week-end in Yosemite. They'd get the crowd together, and start at daybreak and be there by 9 o'clock. Then they'd have a whole day's skiing and tobogganing, and drive home later and—

"Oh, Sue! I can't! I have thousands of things to do today, and tomorrow I thought I'd take it easy—one Sunday that I won't have to wash!"

"You'd rather SLEEP than SKI?"

"You'd rather stick home in this stuffy house, than go up to the beautiful mountains and get into the first snowfall and have FUN?"

"Susie, I don't want to go. I'm tired—I'd rather stay home—I really would. Anyway I can't afford it."

Sue said sharply "Margaret, you're slipping!"

"Slipping?" Margaret didn't feel that she was. The Elsons were pleased with her work at the shop. She was the biggest money-maker in the family, and she had two completely devoted suitors and half a dozen more she could call on in a pinch. She looked at Sue, who had put on lipstick and gold hoop earrings, and hadn't combed her hair.

Sue in emerald green lounging pajamas under a carnel coat, at 11 o'clock in the morning.

"Well, if I am, so are you!" she said.

Whereupon Sue gave her a long, reproachful look and faintly.

The Rise of Arthur H. James from Mine Boy to Candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania

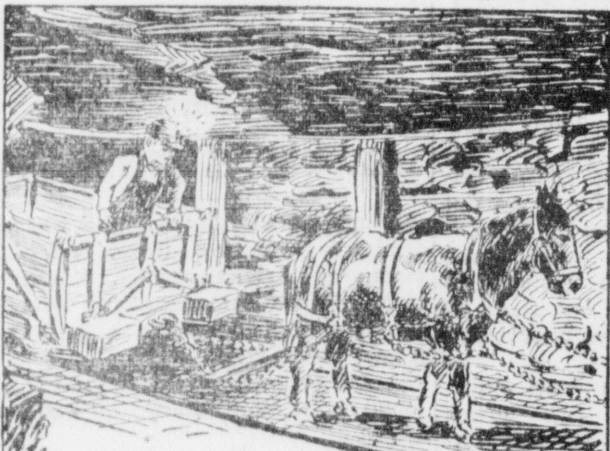

Part 1

ARTHUR H. JAMES WAS BORN JULY 14, 1883 IN PLYMOUTH, PA., A HALF MILE FROM HIS PRESENT RESIDENCE. HIS PARENTS, JAMES D. AND RACHEL EDWARDS JAMES, NATIVES OF WALES, EMIGRATED TO AMERICA. ARTHUR WAS THE ELDEST IN A FAMILY OF FIVE BOYS AND THREE GIRLS. HIS FATHER WAS A MINE WORKER; HIS MOTHER, BEFORE HER MARRIAGE A SCHOOL TEACHER.

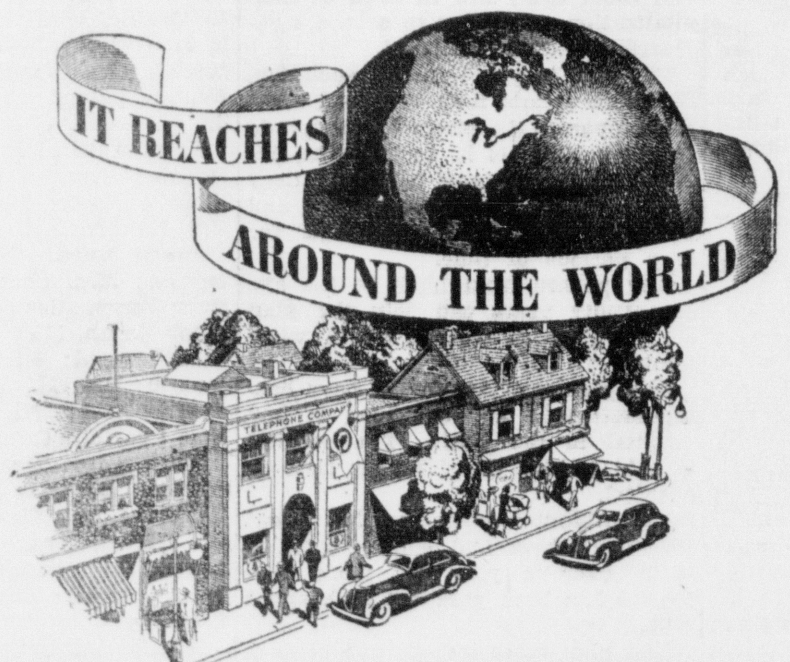

THE ELDER JAMES, SECURED FROM LONDON ONE OF THE FIRST PITTMAN SHORTHAND BOOKS AND UNDERTOOK ITS STUDY. HE HAD HIS SON, ARTHUR, READ TO HIM FOR HOURS EACH NIGHT FROM WELSH AND ENGLISH BIBLES.

ARTHUR JOINED IN SUPPORTING THE FAMILY BY WORKING IN THE SAME MINE AS HIS FATHER. THE MOTTINGHAM COLLIERY IN PLYMOUTH. HE WORKED FROM BEFORE DAWN 'TILL AFTER SUNSET, PICKING SLATE, DRIVING MULES, TENDING THE GATE, AND HAULING WOODEN COAL CARS FROM FACE TO PASSAGE.

JAMES WORKED IN THE MINE DURING VACATION, AS WELL AS AFTER SCHOOL. HE FOUND LITTLE TIME FOR PLAY. HIS THRIFTY FATHER OPENED A SMALL GROCERY STORE ON THE FIRST FLOOR OF THEIR FRAME HOUSE. ARTHUR'S JOB WAS TO DELIVER CUSTOMER'S PURCHASES ON HIS LITTLE WAGON.

but it's part of your own home town

ALMOST anyone you know, anywhere in the world, is within reach of your telephone voice. Telephone service is state-wide, nation-wide, world-wide.

Yet your telephone service is largely a home-town service. Most of the calls you make are to people nearby. And most of the telephone people who serve you live and work in your own home town. Some of them are your friends and neighbors.

This company must be big to serve 1,220,000 Pennsylvania telephones. The Bell System must be big to serve the entire nation. Big because its job is big. But when you take the system apart, you find that it is simply a large number of home-town people, working together to give all the people the finest telephone service in the world at the lowest possible cost.

Is your home or office equipped to take full advantage of modern telephone service? An extension telephone saves time and steps; affords extra protection, privacy and convenience. You can have another telephone in your bedroom or kitchen for surprisingly little! Ask the Business Office or any telephone employee for further information.

Mutual understanding and cooperation between the people of this company and the people we serve are essential to the high quality and low cost of your telephone service.

KNOW YOUR STATE

Regionalism: A Method of Planning
(This is the second in a series of articles dealing with regionalism and regional planning in Pennsylvania.)

(Prepared for The Courier by F. A. Pitkin, Executive Director, Pennsylvania State Planning Board)
Pennsylvania may be said to have, by virtue of its physical location in portions of some half dozen interstate drainage basins, a special interest in regionalism. Within the Commonwealth are also embraced a wide range of distinct cultural and economic areas. Swedish settlements in the southeastern portion, Germans in Germantown and the great limestone valley farm regions, Scotch and Irish in the Wyoming Valley. The initiative and energy of these peoples combined with an unusual degree of community pride and enterprise had led to a wide and diversified opportunity for regional planning.

Among these regional projects the most notable is that of "Incoed"—the Interstate Commission of the Delaware River Basin—which embraces representation and interests of Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey and Delaware. Working in close co-operation with the health engineers and water pollution abatement agencies of the four included states, Incoed has already a fine record of accomplishment; progress toward the abatement of the stream pollution in the Philadelphia metropolitan region through measures such as assisting in the creation of the Delaware County Authority and the Darby Creek Joint Authority in Pennsylvania; the consolidation of planning for conservation of the natural beauty of the Delaware Trail as one of the Country's great scenic routes, as discussed at the recent Callicoon Conference in New York state.

Here we have practical proof of what sound and legitimate regional planning can and should accomplish. None of this accomplished could have been reasonably expected to lie within the scope and powers of local governments working separately. Yet the failure to bring about regional improvements in regard to such immediately practical and beneficial items as abatement of stream pollution, conservation of scenic beauty, unified and standardized sewage disposal, flood and erosion control, seriously affects the comfort, prosperity and well-being of all of the local communities lying within the region.

Regionalism offers a convenient and proper basis for planning the all-round welfare of individual communities in terms of the larger forces and influences which more and more complicate life in even the remotest hamlet or village.

AUSTIN—At Cornwells Heights, Pa., October 28, 1938, Charles H., husband of the late Rachel Ann Austin, in his 92nd year. ## Behind the Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL
Copyright, 1938
King Features Syndicate, Inc.

HOLLYWOOD.—Nothing but talk of war in Hollywood. The schedule of Shirley Temple's new picture, "The Little Princess", was turned topsy turvey at the last minute so as to finish with Richard Greene as soon as possible. He is English and will be subject to an early call.

Greene's first lines had a weird timeliness. The picture is about the Boer war and the script called for Greene to ask Anita Louise: "Would you want me to enlist if they called for volunteers?"

The Robert Montgomery farm was spared the destruction of the eastern hurricane. Bob and his wife were without lights, gas or telephone for five days but the storm did little damage to their land.

Hollywood opinion differs as to the effect of a European war on the motion picture industry. Some of the producers feel that films will be a necessity to bolster the morale of the public abroad. That picture shows will keep on running as they have in Spain. Moreover, that Hollywood will have to supply the product as the technical men in the European companies all will be drafted into the armies. Quota restrictions, it is predicted, will be greatly modified.

The first producer to announce a picture inspired by the current crisis is Edward Galt. He has a story tentatively called "The Magnot Line", which is being rushed to completion. George Bruce, a U. S. veteran of the last war, said the idea to Small. The picture will be unique in that almost all the action will take place in a vast underground fortress similar to the one that parallels the German-French border.

Looks as if the romance between Helen Mack and wealthy sportsman, Lynn Howard, may be wanting. He has been making regular appearances at the House of Murephy with Bobbie Mullineaux, the socialite who is as pretty as a movie star.

J. Benny's horse, Buck Benny, paid $48 to win, $23 to show at the Meadowbrook track near Boston, and—you guessed it—Benny didn't have a dime on the nag.

Robert Taylor's hair is now longer than Weissmuller's. He didn't like the wigs they tested for "Stand Up and Fight", so has gone 10 weeks without a visit to the barber. His hair has reached the point where it can be tied in the back in an abbreviated pig-tail. Which is what the period of the picture, 1850, demands.

Quite a treat for half a dozen Boy Scouts at the Pomona fair. Bette Davis, who is trying a marital vacation from husband Harmon O. Nelson, showed up at the fair alone. One of the Scouts asked her for an autograph and she came back with a request to be shown how to light a fire by rubbing sticks together. It ended up with Bette having hot dogs and toasted marshmallows with the boys.

James Ellison made a home recording of the speeches of Hitler, Mussolini and Chamberlain. An auto accident in the Santa Susana mountains could not have been closer for Kay Sutton. The rear end of the machine skidded over the edge of the road and lodged on a boulder. The only thing between it and a 60-foot drop. Bill Boyd can thank his luck, too. The Hopalong Cassidy troupe were dynamiting for a scene and a rock struck Bill in the eye. He went to the Kernville hospital for a day. Sigrid Gurie and Dr. Spangard at the Victor Hugo. She was flashing a big diamond ring. Madeleine Carroll and the Duke of Caracciolo dining at Mario's. And Margaret Lindsay and Ivan Lebedeff a new twosome at the Club 17.

Richard Hageman's score for "If I Were King" will draw an unusual tribute—the presence of New York music critics at the opening of the picture. Kay Mulvey leaves the M-G-M publicity department to become Hollywood representative of the Crowell publishing company. The Ritz brothers' wardrobe for "The Three Musketeers" will cost $15,000. And Ann Rutherford says there must be some mistake about Gene Autry being kissed for the first time in his new picture. She gave him a screen kiss two years ago in "The Singing Vagabond".

"RECS" LOSE NIGHT GAME BUT WIN CONTEST HERE

Bristol Rees gave the strong Phila. Collegians a good trimming here yesterday 20 to 0. Punky Zefferies returned to the local line-up and played a great game, scoring two touchdowns and nearly had another when one of the local players was offside.

Austin Bono scored his touchdown on several good line plunges. The entire local line was hard to move. Kervick also played good ball.

The Rees traveled to Chambersburg to play Friday evening and were defeated by the score of 12 to 0. This was the lowest score made by Chambersburg this season. The game was one of the best played this season by the Yellowjackets, who are made up of former Bucknell, Fordham and Pitt players.

The outstanding player for the Yellowjackets was Bill Crist, former Bucknell star who ran through the Temple team two seasons ago, did the same against the Rees, scoring two touchdowns. Culp and Lawler also played great ball for Bristol. The crowd was the largest of the season. About 3000 fans paid to see the Bucks clamps in action.

Supports Republicans

Pittsburgh, Oct. 31.—The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, an independent Hearst newspaper which supported Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1932 and Alfred M. Landon in 1936, today announced its endorsement of the candidates of Senator James J. Davis and Judge Arthur H. James, the Republican nominees for Senator and Governor in the November 8th election.

The Sun-Telegraph also urged the election of Republican candidates for Congress and the Legislature, to give a Republican Senate and Governor sufficient support in these branches of the government.

"Governor Earle's administration on the whole has been characterized by extravagance and wastefulness—and worse. He it was who imposed on Pennsylvania the high taxes which are driving industries out of the State," the paper said.

Funeral of M. J. Fallon Is Very Largely Attended

The funeral of the late Martin J. Fallon, who died as the result of automobile injuries sustained early Friday morning, was largely attended today. Mr. Fallon, who was a borough councilman for over 34 years, representing the fourth ward, was held in high esteem by residents of the community.

Hundreds of people attended the viewing at the Fallon residence, 409 Buckley street, last evening. There were a large number of floral tributes of respect and esteem. St. Mark's Church was well filled this morning with friends and relatives of the deceased and the funeral cortege consisted of 35 automobiles.

The honorary pall-bearers were Burgess Clifford L. Anderson, and the members of Bristol borough council. Active pall-bearers were: Messrs. Joseph Foster, John Mulligan, Owen Mulligan, Neal McDevitt, and Phillip Waters, of Bristol; and John Kennedy, Trenton, N. J.

The priests officiating at the solemn requiem mass held in St. Mark's Church were: the Rev. Father Paul Baird, the Rev. Fr. Albert Glass, and the Rev. Fr. William Pope. The funeral was under direction of the W. I. Murphy Estate.

Prizes Awarded at Party At The Ballinger Home

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Ballinger, Newport Road, entertained friends, Saturday evening, at a Halloween party. At the fire-place could be seen a large iron kettle and spoon and an old witch. Fortunes were given to each one.

The guests arrived in costume and prizes were given to: Arthur Peterson, comic dress; Mrs. Clifford Warrick, fancy dress. A novel way of serving the refreshments was in the form of a box lunch, for two. Each one was given part of a pumpkin face and the person who had the other part of the pumpkin face was their partner when eating lunch.

Others present: Mr. and Mrs. Charles Robinson, Tullytown; Clifford Warrick, Philadelphia; Miss Louise Adams, Burlington, N. J.; Edward Myatt, Florence, N. J.; and Mrs. Samuel Rogers; Miss Carrie Rapp, Bristol.

Prizes for games were won by Mr. and Mrs. Rogers, Miss Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Robinson and Miss Rapp.

Tells of Three P's In Fight Against Strong Drink

HULMEVILLE, Oct. 31.—Addressing the congregation of Neshaminy Methodist Church, last evening, George Lewis, Philadelphia, a representative of the Anti-Saloon League, told of "The Three P's of Today's Fight Against the Liquor Traffic."

At this service, which dealt with temperance, Mr. Lewis, who was secured as a speaker by the Hulmeville W. C. T. U., stressed the three P's, telling that "the liquor traffic presents a problem; we can have a Plan to defeat it; and we have a Purpose in trying to defeat it."

He pointed out that not only is the person who drinks alcoholic beverages harmed, but that alcohol is far-reaching in its effects, as it harms the family of the drinker, and the public at large. The numerous motor accidents and other tragedies due to consumption of alcoholic beverages were told of by Mr. Lewis, who derided "the misleading, false statements of many liquor manufacturers."

The need of a plan along educational and legislative lines to defeat the liquor traffic was stressed by the speaker, who then told that "although the fight might seem slow, ground is being gained. Texas has 100 dry counties, and Kentucky has 53."

The special musical numbers were: Anthem, by the choir; saxophone solo, Albert Tomlinson, Langhorne; and vocal duet, the Misses Grace H. Illick and Adeline E. Reetz. The accompanist was Miss Clara L. Illick.

Nine Injured In Three Car and Bus Crash

Eather Carwell, 205 Witherspoon Road, Baltimore, Md., slight cuts.

John Kirk, 668 W. Franklin street, Baltimore, cuts and bruises of the face.

LaSalle Gallop, 921 Central avenue, Baltimore, cuts of the face.

Maurice Levine, 1107 Lenox Road, Brooklyn, N. Y., possible fracture of the skull, and internal injuries.

Levine, Donahue and Bradley were taken to Harriman Hospital for treatment, and the others were treated at the first aid station at Parkland.

The car operated by Watson, state the officers, sideswiped the bus and struck the cars operated by Thomas Donahue, 2nd, nephew of the injured Donahue, and Francis S. Hickey, Hickey, husband of Mrs. Martha Hickey, was uninjured. The crash occurred at seven o'clock. Aid was given in quick manner, with traffic being unimpeded, the officers report.

Hickey and Watson were arrested on charges of assault and battery by automobile, being held to await the outcome of injuries to the others.

Whereas by an Act of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania known as the "Pennsylvania Election Code," Act number 320 approved the 3rd day of June A. D. 1937 making it the duty of the County Board of Elections, at least ten days before each November election to give notice of the same by newspaper publication in the county in accordance with the provisions of section 106 of that Act, and also to give notice of the officers to be elected in the state at large and in said County: the names of the candidates for election to State and County offices whose names will appear upon the ballots; the text of all constitutional amendments and other questions to be submitted at such election; the places at which the election is to be held in the various election districts of the County and the date of the election and the hours during which the polls will be open:

Therefore, we, the County Board of Elections of the County of Bucks; do hereby give notice and proclaim to the electors of Bucks County, Pennsylvania, that an election will be held in the several election districts of Bucks County aforesaid on Tuesday, November 8th, A. D. 1938, being the first Tuesday after the first Monday of the said month, between the hours of 7 o'clock A. M. and 8 o'clock P. M., Eastern Standard Time,
